VALUABLE NEW FRUIT.
The Aguacate or Alligator Pear Grows to Perfection in Lower Rio Grande Valley.

[Special to The Bryan Eagle.]
San Antonio, Texas, Dec. 1.—Encouraged by the results from experiments at the U. S. Experimental Station, at Fort Brown, near Brownsville, Southwest Texas farmers are planning to invade the North with several new fruits and vegetables, hitherto unknown to the great majority of Americans. Considerable success has been had in this section of Texas, in growing various kinds of native Mexican fruits, especially the aguacate. This, sometimes called the "alligator pear", grows readily and will prove a decided addition to salad dishes. It is the size of a large pear, and is covered with a thick skin. The meat is firm and of delicious taste, of green color and oily. The native Mexican plucks it from the tree, peels off the skin, and frequently makes a meal off two or three aguacates without resorting to the bread-like tortilla. It is proposed to advertise it on the Northern markets for visitors who come to San Antonio grow very fond of it in aguacate salad, and the hotels and Mexican restaurants feature it on their menu cards. With lettuce, tomatoes, and aguacate, with a plain French dressing, a dish fit to place before any epicure is made.
The success that has attended the growing of the aguacate is duplicated with the mango, the papaya, and the custard apple. At present, these fruits are imported from Mexico. The success at the Government station has opened up opportunities in this line for commercial growing, and acres are now being laid out to devote to the propagation of these new dishes to the American table.

HYMN FOR FATHERS' DAY.

Chicago Pastor Chooses Sextet from "Lucia" as Music for His Words.
With his stanzas fitted to the rhythm of a masterly operatic melody—the sextet from "Lucia"—the Rev. William E. Barton, pastor of the First Congregational church of Oak Park, Chicago, has realized his ambition to become the author of a hymn in praise of fathers, brothers and of sturdy manhood. Dr. Barton's new hymn was sung Sunday for the first time at the church in Oak Park. Following are the six stanzas:

We have thanked thee for our mothers,
And we thank thee still again;
Now for fathers and for brothers—
Lord, we thank thee for good men!
For our fathers who have brought us
By the paths that they have trod,
And whose righteous manhood taught us
Of the fatherhood of God!

Bless our brothers and our neighbors,
In their tasks of hand and brain;
Strengthen all men for their labors,
Help the meager load and strain.
Bless the men who face the dangers
Of the battle and the sea;
Guide the men who roam as strangers,
Making paths where roads shall be.
Save the manhood of our nation;
Guide us with thy staff and rod;
Make each coming generation
Know the fatherhood of God.

For our sisters and our mothers
Oft we've prayed and pray again;
Now for fathers and for brothers,
Father, hear our prayer for men!
"I desired music that was vigorous,

Drop in at Parks & Waldrop's and see the Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothes they are showing.

masculine, dramatic, and possibly not too pious," he said. "At the same time I wanted something uplifting and eminently worthy. In casting about for such an air my thoughts went back to a moment when I stood on the steps of the capitol in Washington and heard the Marine band play Donizetti's sextet from 'Lucia.'"

A BASKETBALL EPIC.

The Thanksgiving Game Between Wellborn and Harvey.
Wellborn, who was so bright and gay, Rushed forth to battle on Thanksgiving Day;
Harvey laughed at their confident way,
And proceeded their hopes in the dust to lay.
They tell me they didn't do it fair—
Over girls and rules, they ran right square;
Without regard to life or limb,
For the goal they rushed with might and vim.

We couldn't withstand the Harvey yell,
And Wellborn shouted "Ah, we'll!"
In the sweet by and by, in the dust we will lay
Proud Harvey in our next basketball play.

The Wellborn team was young and small,
Not much experience with basketball;
Harvey has grown gray in the cause,
She is the veteran of many wars.

So we hug to our hearts this fond delusion,
That out of all this dire confusion,
When we learn how to jump a wall
We'll beat Harvey at basketball!

Found a Place.
The billboard had one poster left and no conspicuous place to put it. He stood on the corner and wondered what he should do with it. Presently an Italian woman carrying a big load of wood on her head passed by.
"Better than a Broadway electric tower for my business," said he.
Paste brush and paste were requisitioned, the poster was clapped on the perambulating wood pile, and for fifteen minutes the ever curious Broadway crowd stopped, turned and even followed to learn something about the commodity that was advertised in that novel manner.—New York Sun.

Wanted to Know.

"Have you ever read any of my husband's poetry?"
"Yes, I have had that—er—yes, ma'am."
"What do you think of it?"
"Madam, are you looking for a compliment for your husband's verses or for sympathy for yourself?"—Houston Post.

Different Now.

"Before we were married," sighed the fond wife, "you used to call me up by long distance telephone just as you used to say, to hear my voice."
"Well," retorted the rebellious husband, "nowadays you won't let me get far enough from you to use the long distance."—London Telegraph.

John Wesley as a Physician and Some of His Remedies.
It is not generally known that John Wesley in one of his brief intervals of leisure published a sort of medical vade mecum called not inappropriately "Primitive Physic." It was first published in 1747, and it ran into at least twenty-four editions. The author was greatly surprised there was so swift and large a demand for it. In the later editions he was able to add the word "Tried" to certain remedies the virtues of which he had meanwhile found opportunities of testing. After five years' careful trial and notwithstanding the objections of the learned he recommends for the ague "to go into the cold bath just before the cold fit," but omits to say how to time the coming of the fit. To prevent apoplexy use the cold bath and drink only water. If this proves useless and a fit should declare itself you have only to "put a handful of salt with a pint of cold water and if possible pour it down the throat of the patient." To cure asthma "take a pint of cold water every morning, washing the head therein immediately after." Wesley gives four ways of curing old age—"take far water morning and evening" or "a decoction of nettles" or "be electrified daily" or "chew cinnamon daily and swallow your saliva." The two great panaceas in the Wesleyan doctrine are the use of cold water and the use of electricity, and at the end of the book are columns of every sort of disease which may be overcome by these simple expedients.—St. James' Gazette.
